Any changes in content constitute a separate edition. To use images, quotations, or citations in a separate edition requires additional permission as well as additional publication fees. Permission must be granted, and the publication fee paid in advance of the publication of the separate edition.

Consideration of the requirements of copyrights is the responsibility of the author, producer, and publisher. Applicants assume all responsibility for questions of copyright and invasion of privacy that may arise in copying and using the materials.

Everyone who reproduces materials from the Special Collections Research Center (SCRC) must supply one copy of his or her finished work, be it a book, article, film, website, etc. to the SCRC.

Please complete form and return to the Special Collections Research Center (SCRC). The process of granting permission requires approximately five business days for the SCRC to evaluate the nature of the request. It is advisable, therefore, to allow enough lead time to obtain permission before the materials are needed. In some instances, the SCRC may assess a fee for the permission. Receipt of this form signed by a SCRC staff member constitutes permission to publish the item requested.
